BY IMOGENE H. SYKES.

"I say, Paul, what do you think? You know Deep Dell—"

"Why, Frank, of course I do," interrupted a bright voice, as the impatient news carrier, in the form of a restless lad of fourteen, clattered noisily into the quiet, sunny kitchen, and checked the important work of cake-making with his abrupt inquiry.

"Well, you can't go there any more. The owner's come back, and stuck up bills all over everything, that trespassing won't be allowed. It's a shame, I think."

And Frank sat astride of a kitchen chair, and looked dolefully at his sister as she put down the cake-pan, and regarded him in turn.

"The owner of Deep Dell come back?" she repeated, musingly.

"Yes, and locked up all the gates, and stuck up notices that he will punish trespassing on the property. And, Paul, the strawberries are just ripe," added Frank suggestively, looking at thoughtful face of the girl, as she still considered the startling news of the 'Squire's return, after so many years of absence.

The word strawberries aroused her.

"It's a shame!" she flashed out then, stamping a strongly-clad foot on the brick hearth, as she popped her cake pan into the oven. "And I shall not mind his notices. Notices, indeed!" she scoffed with a high head. "I've picked strawberries from Deep Dell Farm ever since I was a little child, and he was running wild over the country; and I mean to pick them again to-day."

"But he'll punish trespassers," urged Frank, with secret delight, thinking of the cake and strawberries for supper.

Pauline furred her apron like a flag and nodded her head.

"Let him!"

"What would you do?" wickedly urged the spirit of mischief, rocking his chair.

"Let him!" laconically retorted Paul, as she made things tidy about the kitchen, and reached up for a basket beside the dresser.

"But, look here, Paul you're the minister's sister you know, and ought to set an example of—!"

The boy floundered in a moral slough, as the steady eyes of his sister settled on his face.

"If you honesty, Frank Kirk, she said calmly, tying her sunbonnet strings under her chin, "you shall not have one berry, no, nor cake either." Minister's sister or not, I consider I have the right to those berries, when I gathered them years and years before he ever knew anything about them.

And she walked resolutely to the door.

"Well, if he runs across your bow," advised Frank from the gate, watching her resolute face with satisfaction, "just put up your boarding-nets and give him a broadside."

Paul trudged away in silence, pondering upon subjects—the 'Squire's return from his roving life, and the indignity he had put upon the village by his notices and barred gates.

"I will look out for my rights," she concluded, illogically, as she climbed the fence into the strawberry patch, "and the people can take care of theirs."

No thought of the 'Squire entered her little mutinous head, as she filled her basket with luscious fruit.

"David always brings home company on Friday evening," she soliloquized, as she picked on industriously, "and whoever it is will enjoy these berries, I know."

She filled her basket evenly to the brim, and arose with flushed cheeks, disheveled hair, sun-bonnet hanging down by the strings tied under chin, to find her face to face with a stranger—a man, who stood regarding her quietly.

Paul stood motionless. He must be a tramp in that old brown coat, slouch hat and dusty top boots.

"If you please," he said, very politely for a tramp, "is this trespassing?"

Paul thought of the notices and the punishment attending the act, and was sorry for the man.

"It is," she said calmly; "and you had better leave at once, for there is no knowing what the owner might do, if he caught you."

And she lifted her basket majestically.

"Is he so very hard, then?" asked the tramp, with humble deference to her manner.

"I fancy he is a—a tyrant," replied Paul, superbly, "and means to institute reform in all its severest and most disagreeable phases at Deep Dell. So, my good man, you'd better take yourself off."

With this advice, the minister's sister went her way over the fence, down into the lane, and home to Frank, waiting at the gate, and bracing a mainyard, according to his idea of the thing.

"Well!" he cried out eagerly, "did the enemy show himself?"

Paul lifted the lid of her basket.

"I saw no one but a tramp—a very gentlemanly tramp, I must say; and I advised the poor fellow to keep out of harm."

Frank whistled a bar of "A Life on the Ocean Wave."

"Here comes David with a gentleman," he said with sudden gravity. "I wonder who his Friday night companion is this time? Say, Paul, if it should be the 'Squire?"

But the girl had fled within, to attend to her tea-table, and see if the little maid-of-all-work had watched the cake carefully.

Everything was right, and a daintier or better-served table was never presented to hungry mortals than that to which the minister invited his guest within an incredibly short time after Paul had disappeared from the gate.

Frank was right—it was the 'Squire.

The young girl bowed calmly to the grave, courteous man her brother present, her eyes resting the while upon the dish of ripe, red berries, with an indignant thought of his barred gates and notices.

A puzzled look came into her face as the stranger talked on, and she glanced furtively at him, only to meet his grave eyes full upon her, and to feel the floor rock beneath her feet.

"So they protest against my claiming my own," he was saying, in answer to the minister's report on the discontent of the village. "They will become obedient enough when they find out I am not a tyrant."

Paul could bear no more. She dared not look up as the minister helped his guest to the strawberries, but with a hurried excuse for cream (which was in the little silver jug beside the berries all the while), she left the room with eager steps.

She was gone so long that Frank came to hunt her up, and found her, disconsolate and miserable, on the back step.

"Oh, Frank!" she cried. "He was the tramp!"

"The gentlemanly tramp!" and the boy sat down beside her, aghast.

"What shall I do?"

She was so wretched and pale that Frank arose to the situation at once.

"I wouldn't mind, Paulie!" he said, coaxingly.

"Oh, but I must mind! He is going to raise David's salary, which means so much to you, and to repair the church, And, after all, he is right. I didn't see it until I heard him tell David his plans and ideas, and—and what does he think of me?"

Here a miserable little sob choked the pretty voice, and Frank grew desperate.

"Just come in and have it out with him," he urged. "Make a clean breast of it, and he'll have to be polite then."

But Paul lacked courage to confess her fault, and neither then nor long months after, when the 'Squire was a frequent visitor at the cottage, and a kind friend to the whole village, could she gain strength to speak, and ask for some little of the kindness he gave others and denied her.

The strawberries were ripe again at Deep Dell, and Paul was walking sadly down the lane past the corner fence she used to climb so deftly, thinking not of the berries, not of Frank away at college, nor of the new cottages down in the village, but of her own unpardonable fault, which lay like a heavy cloud upon her, when a shadow fell upon her path, and looking up she saw the 'Squire quietly regarding her. She paused humbly.

"Have you nothing to say to me, Paul?" he asked, in a strange tone. "After one long year, have you no word for me?"

With a break in her voice that seemed a part of the tears that would come, Paul forgot her defiance, and thought only of the heavy heart she had carried so long, and made her confession then and there.

"The accused pleads guilty, and is recommended to mercy," said the 'Squire, with a bright laugh; "but, Paul, I did not mean that." She looked up eagerly as he took both hands. "And if I give you a free pardon for trespassing on my property, and stealing my fruit, what shall I ask in return for the peace of mind you have robbed me of in this last year?"

Paul thought of Frank's advice, "to have it out with him," and so said, softly but bravely:

"The heartache you have given me by your coldness."

She looked at him fearlessly now, smiling and flushing, as he crushed her hands.

"Will you hear your sentence?" he cried.

"Yes," she softly laughed.

"Then you are henceforth and forever to be mistress, not only of Deep Dell, but owner and manager of the heart and devotion of—"

"The gentlemanly tramp!" said Paul, saucy with happiness.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY EVENING, NOV. 25, 1881.

LEXINGTON has an ordinance compelling drummers to take out a $75 license annually.

THE late lynching of a negro in Ohio, shows a bad state of society over there. According to some northern journals such things only occur in the southern states.

A WASHINGTON despatch says that Mrs. Christianey, the other night, under the influence of hysteria, ran around the streets in a scanty night robe. She was returned to her home by a colored bailiff.

THE annual product of gold is now less than $100,000,000, and its foreign coinage is practically suspended. In the United States the production has gradually diminished. In 1878 it was $47,266,107; in 1879 it was $38,900,000; in 1880, $36,000,000.

MR. BLAINE's wealth is estimated at $3,000,000. He has been a successful speculator in railroad ventures and coal lands. He is an undoubted candidate for the republican nomination for the presidency in 1884, with a fair chance of winning the prize.

THE Commissioner of Pensions states that $227,040 claims for arrears are on file, and that $165,481 will probably be allowed. The sum of $254,126,600 will be required to pay them. Allowing $15,000,000 for payments not demanded, about $235,000,000 will have to be paid out.

MAHONE has written to the New York papers explaining what he means by the "Liberal Victory" achieved in Virginia. These Republicans papers fail to see anything in it further than the repudiation of $10,000,000 of debt. It will be famous as a victory only for that.

THE Yeoman of the 24th says: The penitentiary commission, consisting of Judge R. H. Stanton, Gen. H. B. Lyon and Gen. Wm. M. Beckner, yesterday had a conference with the architect, and determined upon the general features of their report. They will be busily engaged in making the report during the next week or ten days.

MacVeagh and the Star Route.

Attorney-General MacVeagh's methods of obtaining evidence on which to base the prosecution of the Star Route Ring, is just now the subject of much severe comment by the press. M. C. Redell, confidential agent and clerk for Senator Dorsey, prepared and sent to President Garfield a sworn statement, in which he alleged that he had been repeatedly urged by the Attorney-General to steal certain private papers and records from the office of Mr. Dorsey, in the city of New York. This paper was found upon the person of the President when he was shot, and is now given to the public for the first time. It is a very long document and gives in detail accounts of the writer's interviews with MacVeagh, Senator Clayton and Postmaster-General James, and states the reward he was offered for the treachery suggested. This effort to corrupt Redell, it is said, was made the ground of an application to President Garfield that the prosecution should be dismissed and MacVeagh removed from office. This, it is asserted, Garfield was disposed to do, but was killed before any action could be taken. Thus the matter stands. Redell is represented as a man of good standing, a practicing lawyer and worthy of credit, and the statement as to the methods which he fixes upon the Attorney-General is supported by other facts and circumstances.

NEWS BREVITIES.

A strike by the hackmen at New York failed.

The Emperor of Germany is reported to be dying.

The New York Express has been sold to Cyrus W. Field.

William Harris's planing mill at Marietta, O., burned. Loss $5,000.

Henry Lutz was kicked to death by Frederick Sauer, at Cleveland, O.

A farmer named Sullivan was killed near Dublin for paying his rent.

In Indiana the river is rising in the Wabash bottoms, and some trouble is coming from it.

The Ohio Legislature is to be asked for an appropriation to rebuild the Idiot Asylum at Columbus.

Great excitement prevails in Philadelphia owing to the rumored wholesale robbery of the city treasury.

Herman Peter, an industrious mechanic at Lancaster, O., shot and killed Phillip Betz, who had slandered Peter's daughter.

One hundred of the cigar manufacturers held a meeting and decided to resist the strike.

Eight Ohio capitalists are figuring on the purchase of a large body of land in Texas, with the view to open an extensive sheep range.

Marshal Crittenden, of Kentucky, who has been again appointed by Chief Justice Waite, is at Washington arranging his bond.

A dispatch says that the Pope is about to change his residence from Rome to Malta or Salisbury, on account of the opposition he receives in the Holy City.

Martha Hughes, smart, sixteen and pretty, belle of Patterson, New Jersey, eloped and married a negro. The parents of the girl invoked the aid of the police and reclaimed their daughter.

An ugly scandal, involving the officials of the treasury department, is rumored. Charges of misappropriation of the Yorktown funds are made. Cigars, liquors and other expensive luxuries were charged to the government and used by the Department officers.

Holiday Directory.

The following are dealers in holiday goods. We cordially recommend them to the patronage of our readers:

Miss Lou Powling, millinery, etc.
A. M. Rogers, boots, shoes, hats, etc.
John Wheeler, oysters, game and good things generally.
F. H. Traxel, the confectioner.

COAL continues to sell at 12 cents.

NEWELL & HENRY want 10,000 live turkeys.

HECHINGER, THOMAS & Co. cut up three hundred and twelve hogs yesterday.

ABERDEEN sent in sixteen subscribers to-day, for the DAILY BULLETIN. Thanks.

REV. W. D. POWERS, rector of the Church of the Nativity, preaches at Augusta to-day.

Look out for Blaine & Nute's holiday advertisement. Their place is perfect bazaar of Christmas novelties.

MAYSVILLE business is booming. The holiday trade promises to be a brisk one, and the merchants are all getting ready for it.

POGUE & Co's distillery, below the city, is making about three hundred barrels of their famous Rye and Bourbon Whisky every month.

We shall shortly publish a story translated from the German by Masters Willie Wood, Buckner Wallingford, Willie Honan and Arthur Glascock, of this city.

MR. WM. AUSTIN, of the DAILY BULLETIN, will canvass the city to-morrow for subscriptions. If you feel like encouraging our enterprise, please give him your name.

DR. G. W. MARTIN, who has had about thirteen years experience as a councilman, is a candidate for re-election in the second ward. At present he has no opposition.

MR. ANDREW T. COX is a candidate for councilman, in the fourth ward. He is a man of sound sense, prudent in business matters, and would make a most acceptable city official.

THE Flemingsburg mail, Thursday, made three trips up and down the Kentucky Central before it was delivered here. This is a new eccentricity on the part of that singular road.

THE Potomac, on her last trip down, struck a snag near Augusta, carrying away all the outriggers on the starboard side. She laid up for repairs at Cincinnati, and will not be out until to-morrow.

MR. JOHN N. THOMAS is a candidate for re-election to the council from the third ward. We have had much experience in city affairs, and has made a very useful official. Mr. T. Mat. Pearce, a young gentleman of fine business qualifications, is his opponent.

DR. T. H. N. SMITH has removed to the new Cochran building on Court street, and now occupies "Dental parlors" in reality. His surroundings are exceedingly handsome. Everything is so elegant, you will find it a pleasure to have your teeth pulled.

THE Covington Commonwealth pelts Maysville thus: "Another grain boom in Chicago. The Cincinnati and Maysville speculators will be apt to go slow on this boom."

Good advice, perhaps, but nobody has been seriously hurt here.

PERSONAL.

Points About People here and Elsewhere.

Mr. T. Gordon Gilmore is at home from Joplin, Mo.

Major N. H. Hotchkiss, Freight Agent of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, is in Maysville to-day.

PROF. VENNER does not like the outlook for December. He says: "It appears ugly, and smacks of bitter, biting cold, and the entry of the month is likely to bring in winter abruptly. The New Year will probably enter with fair sleighing, but the snow falls will not be so severe as last winter. My general impression, he adds, respecting the winter of 1881-2 point to some very open and balmy periods of considerable duration towards midwinter; early and intense cold at the setting in of the season, and again towards, and in March; a rather backward and wet summer, with but few very hot periods.

To Advertisers.

We are ready, gentlemen, to receive your favors, and prepared to give you the benefit of the circulation of the DAILY BULLETIN. Our readers now number about three hundred and new names are being added to our list every day. Our advertising rates, which will be made known upon application, are as low as we can, in justice to our own interest, make them. We respectfully ask you to give us a trial.

REPORTS of epidemics of the dreaded disease, small-pox, existing in many localities in this and other states, ought to arouse our citizens to the necessity of extreme cleanliness, both about their premises and in the streets and gutters in front of their houses. Everything about the place should be kept clean. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.
